A short account of the genealogies of the present inhabitant householders of the Parish of Old Kilcummin and of portions of adjoining Parishes.

This account is taken almost verbatim from an old inhabitant of the Old Kilcummin Parish (John Lyne).

INTRODUCTION

Being, so to speak, out of a job, or shall I say beyond all jobs for I am a pensioned N. Teacher, I devote much time to gardening, bee-keeping etc., and I am very fond of walking along the well-kept roads, and among the pleasant green fields of the better-kept farms of the district where I live. I find such walks a great relaxation, and a great enjoyment too, especially when I chance to meet interesting people on my way. There are many such people in the locality which fate has decided shall be the scene of my future activities in what so many call a miserable world but which I have found to be nothing of the kind, for after all, this world is what we ourselves make it. People come to it and go from it, through birth and death, but if they only consider that it is but a sojourn for a time, a sort of preparation for a better and a brighter world, the result will surely be more contented and happier lives for all, no matter what disabilities and discomforts they may have to encounter from time to time. During my walks I meet people who are inveterate grumblers with whom I argue that life is altogether too short to spend it in complaining, and that there are many jolly and merry people who suffer more than they do from the buffets of misfortune in their daily lives. I do not think that I am always able to convince such people by my arguments, but I take much pains, and find much joy in trying to prove that I am right. And so I spend my days.

But let me come back to business. One fine evening of the Autumn of 1935, after a long walk through roads and fields, and after having enjoyed myself much in watching the antics of a yelping terrier and a watchful and ready greyhound in their efforts to catch, and of course to kill elusive rabbits and still more elusive hares, I came to a meadow in which the old man referred to in the above heading as The Old Inhabitant was working contentedly saving some hay, and taking his ease too, for the day was so fine that he had an early finish. I knew this old man to be a good story teller, and a better historian, and I thought to myself that here was a good opportunity for a chat about the history of the Parish of Kilcummin. I had written some time before a little story of Kerry for the children of Kerry Schools, and on several occasions already I had to listen patiently to a little light abuse from him, because I did not give the history of my native Parish more in detail in this little work of mine.

After some desultory conversation which included some good jokes – his is an inveterate joker, by the way – he began to refer to what I called his “Pet Subject”, that of genealogy. “You said in that little book of yours,” he remarked, “that the genealogies of those undertakers and confiscators who came to Kerry in the times of Queen Elizabeth and King William of Orange are worthless from a historical point of view. I, on the contrary, say that they are most interesting especially to the descendants, and there are many in Kerry now who claim to be such, of those people. Now I think you ought to take the very earliest opportunity of giving the genealogies of the common people, so far as you can, whom such confiscators and undertakers hunted, plundered and murdered in the name of civilisation! We have some histories of Kerry giving the genealogies of those civilisers. Why not have as much as we can of the genealogies of their victims and their descendants?”

I was struck at once with the force and justice of these remarks of my old friend, and after a little thought I replied, “By jove! You are right. But what can I do? I am like so many of my acquaintances who cannot tell you who their grandparents were and where they came from. And as for going back to trace their great-great grandparents – why they will tell you, perhaps as an excuse for their ignorance – that, after all, what is the use in being able to trace their ancestors at all. I once heard a man remark that it was of no advantage in the world to him say, if some remote ancestor of his stole a pig, or moved a mountain, but that what concerned him most was the price he would be able to get for his pig, or the chances he had of being able to sell his calves at the coming market. “You are right, after a fashion,” was his reply, “and is it not a great pity that there are so many who think in this way. Why, man alive! Were not our old Irish Kings and chieftains able to trace their descendants back to the son of Japhet. I know, of course, that you will say they were able to do so with the help of the old Irish bards who depended on their powers of invention for this purpose. But, did the old Irish bards invent anything for the purpose? I hold they did not. You who read so many books relating to ancient Ireland must, by this time, have surely realised that many of the people who lived then, but especially the bards, were experts in the matter of genealogy. Genealogy was far more important to them than was their religion which was but a groping after the supernatural in their efforts to connect in some way the wonderful power they felt within themselves, the soul, with the most extraordinary miraculous powers attributed to mythical heathen gods. Long before the Latin alphabet was introduced into Ireland the Irish were in the habit of erecting pillar stones over the graves of their distinguished dead. What were the Ogham inscriptions on such stones but a short account of the genealogy of those who slept so peacefully underneath. Again, you say that there are many people of the present day who cannot tell who their grandparents were. Well, all are not of this type. I, for instance, can tell you, and I am but an ignorant old man, who the grandparents were, and in many cases who the great-great grandparents were of all the householders who live at present in the parish of Old Kilcummin, the boundaries of which as you know extended to Rathmore, and of many of those who live in some of the adjoining Parishes.”

I looked in wonder at this old friend of mine. I knew well that he was famous for tracing relationships between families, so much so indeed that I once remarked to him, in fun, that his powers in this respect were so extraordinary that he’d wind up in being able to tell the relationship that existed between Molly Buckley’s gander and Paddy Loughnane’s goose! “Surely, you are but joking,” I answered, to be able to do this one should have spent a lifetime at the work in order to do it with any sort of exactness”.

“Well,” was the reply, “haven’t I spent a lifetime at it. Now, you are able to write, you have a typewriter, and why not get a chance to prove my words. I was born in the east of Old Kilcummin. I have been a neighbour of yours for the past forty years or so and cannot give in consequence the names of the young generation now rising in the townlands near that of my birth, but I can tell of all the “old stock” of the whole of Kilcummin and of sufficient of their genealogies to make interesting matter for publication in a book or a newspaper. If ever you publish it the thousand or more householders of this large parish, together with those of the adjoining parishes whose genealogies will be given also, will read the result with great pleasure. The descendants of these people will cherish such a record and will keep adding to it as the years and the centuries go by till the people of this part of Kerry become as expert at the tracing of their descendants as were the Irish of old. Other parishes will follow suit, and will you not be a proud man to be the pioneer of such a grand and noble work as this. I am willing to do my part. Will you do yours?”

“I’ll think over the matter,” I replied. “It is time for us both to be going home now. We’ll discuss the thing later on.” For some days after this conversation I often thought about this matter. I realised only too well from experience what the work would mean – the monotonous daily round of typing after spending nights taking down, in the rough, the information my friend would supply, and especially did I think of the unprofitable nature of the work when completed. Then again I thought of the useless way I was then spending my time apart from the pottering in my cottage gardens – the reading of trashy novels, the smoking of innumerable pipes of tobacco, the games at cards, the lazy snoozings in an armchair and so on, and at last I decided to take on the work for a change, and to please my old friend also.

I met him a few days later and his first salute was, "well, have you decided to take on the work?" I replied in tentative fashion, "Are you willing to travel over to my place for two miles every fine night in order to carry out the work?" "I am bedad," was his answer, but are you willing to take all the blame for any mistakes to be made?" then I enquired.

"There will be no mistakes," was his confident answer. "Very well, let us get on with the work in God's name," was my reply.

In spite of my friend's confidence in himself I am afraid there are too many mistakes in the account he will give on the genealogies of certain families. I can give him but little assistance indeed. True, in cases of doubt I can make some enquiries, and the result of his and my efforts will I hope give general satisfaction to the members of all the families to be dealt with. It is to be hoped too, that the method I shall adopt, in the absence of what are commonly known as "trees" and which is entirely too cumbersome, will cause no difficulty to readers. This method which I may call "recessional spacing" seems to me to be the only one suited for either a book or for a newspaper.

In order to shorten my labour as much as possible in what must prove to be a lengthy work I shall use contractions, especially for words that are to be used very often. Here is a list of such contractions:-

TUREENAMULT

A hundred years ago, or perhaps less, twenty-one families were evicted from their holdings in the townland of Tureenamult. As far as can now be remembered the principal families so evicted were, John Cronin of the Biddy Gineadha's husband, another Cronin; Paddy Scannel; Darby Crowley; Paddy Collins, etc. All these families were evicted by a middleman whose name is not now remembered - small loss! - and all the evicted persons went to live in other farms or settled themselves in mountain cabins, and portions of mountain and unreclaimed land kindly given them by good neighbours. After the lapse of some years all the land included in those farms was given to a William O'Connor who came from Scartaglen. Mick Cronin of Tureenamult was the principal benefactor to many of the evicted tenants. He had a lease of his farm which was large and included a goodly stretch of mountain pasture, and the Scannell family, and Biddy Gineadha and some others settled themselves down in the most elevated part of it. Later some others of the evicted tenants got lots in this mountain land from the new owner, Wm. O'Connor. At this time, and for many years before and after, this rule of eviction was very prevelant, and there was no remedy for the unfortunate people and their families, especially for those who had no money to purchase the right to enter into possission of small farms in other districts where the middlemen were not entirely lost to a sense of right and justice. There was no such thing as fixity of tenure, and any tenant, unless protected by a lease could be evicted from his holdings, too often indeed because of the cupidity of an envious neighbour, and forced to resort to the emigrant ship, to the bothan by the roadside, or worst of all, to the workhouse. Grabbing of farms was common for too long a period, to the enrichment of middlement and landlords or their agents, until Captain Moonlight put a stop to the practice. Grabbers were bad neighbours, but there were good neighbours also and to them, as well as to the growth of a healthy public opinion, helped on by Captain Moonlight, was due the agitation, and the Land War which ultimately put an end, not only to grabbing but to landlordism itself.

Old Morgan MacSweeney was a middleman who lived at Tureenamult in The Quarry Lodge. He held at a nominal rent, under leases, the townlands of Scrahanfada, Knockageeha, and the greater portions of Leamyglissane and Knockmanagh from the Earl of Kenmare. He held the townland of Raydrinagh, also under lease, from Robert Fitzgerald of Knockrour. He had many tenants in these townlands, and he himself held from the Earl of Kenmare the Quarry farm at Tureenamult where he opened a limestone quarry. This farm and quarry together with the townland of Knockageeha were subject to a head rent of but one shilling a year. Old Morgan was m. twice. His first wife was an O'Mahony (?) from Coachford, Co. Cork, and with her he had issue - Denis, Maria and John. After the death of his first wife he m. Miss Curtayne, an aunt of Thomas Curtayne of Ballycasheen, Killarney. Thos. Curtayne was the middleman who held Annaghbeg where he also had tenants. The O'Sullivan and the O'Herlihy families were tenants in this townland for generations, and for some reason, eviction perhaps, they left and their lands were given to Pay Moynihan, Maurice Brosnan, John Brosnan, Tim Spillane, and O'Herlihy, Tim Sullivan of Meentogues, Paddy Spillane, Darby Sheehan, Jer Lyne, John Riordan, Pat Culloty, Darby O'Donoghue and Mike Warren whose father got the middleman's house and farm when he went to live at Ballycasheen.

Of old Morgan's second marriage there was issue - Morgan, James, Anne and Ellen. James and Ellen died when young. In the course of years and when his children were of age the old man must have decided to settle his sons in large farms, and for this purpose the tenants in Scrahanfada were ordered to quit their holdings. The tenants who went included four families of the Cronins, who lived in Scrahanfada for ten generations before that time, the Cremins, the Riordans, Dan Mannix, Michael MacGillicuddy, Patsy O'Leary and perhaps others. There was no gainsaying the order of the middleman; out they had to go from their comfortable homes and from the farms which, in nearly all cases they themselves, and their ancestors had made out of the waste, and to begin again in cabins and bothauns erected hastily by the roadside or on the uninviting mountain side, to reclaim the moorland in order to enable them to sustain themselves and their families. Some were able to procure farms in other districts, for it was then the custom for farmers to quit their holdings without notice to the landlord or middleman who was then but too anxious to procure other tenants. The farms of the tenants evicted were then made into two large farms one of which was given to Denis MacSweeney, and the other to young Morgan MacSweeney. Denis went to live in John Cronin's house, and Young Morgan continued to live with his father. Denis did not keep his farm very long; perhaps he found as so many do at the present day, that farming did not pay. He sold his farm to Jeremiah Murphy of Glasha-Keenleen, Co. Cork, and he went to live at Barna where he got a large farm and he m. Kate McCarthy of Barna. With her he had but one child, a d. named Maria. When Denis died his widow sold her house and farm to John Culloty of Annhillmore, Glenflesk, reserving to herself the use of the house and lawn till her death. Her d. m. an O'Donoghue of Knocknaboul, Ballydesmond.

Young Morgan MacSweeney m. Mary Kane, a sister of Dr. Kane of Annascaul. There was no issue. John MacSweeney, his step-brother, became an army doctor and having practised his profession in the English army for a period he found his health impaired and he came home to his father, but he died a few years after. His death was universally regretted as he was very kind and good to the poor of the district round the Quarry Lodge.

When old Morgan died young Morgan became possessor of the Quarry Farm with the limestone Quarry, part of Scrahanfada, and perhaps the townland of Knocknageeha and part of Knockmanagh. It is believed, however, that old Morgan's leasehold interest in Knocknageeha and Knockmanagh ceased with his death.

Anne was left the Leamyglissane farms and Maria, her step-sister, lived with her at Prospect House, till her (Anne's) death. During her lifetime Anne sold her interest in her Leamyglissane property to Larry and Mike Curtin, Mick Finegan, Arthur O'Leary and Patrick MacCarthy. She kept Prospect House and Lawn, and when she died, Maria sold this house and lawn to John Finegan reserving to herself the use of Prospect House till her death. Young Morgan was also left by his father the Raydrinagh farms but the lease soon expired and the landlord, Robert Fitzgerald, then occupied them and he built a house there.

Old Morgan evicted some families of the Lynes and MacCarthys in the townland of Knockmanagh, and he divided their lands among their neighbours. Because of evictions in this townland and that of Scrahanfada, Old Morgan was disliked by many and his memory still excites feelings of bitterness among their descendants.

The MacSweeneys of Quarry Lodge, it is but fair to say here, were good-living and charitable, and very good neighbours. They were generally regarded as better-class middlemen in the age when landlords possessed under the law powers which were at all times exacting and exasperating, and in most cases applied with much harshness and cruelty. Mick Finegan of Tournanonagh bought a farm at Leamyglissane from Miss A. MacSweeney. He was m. to Betty O'Sullivan of Knockmanagh. Issue – Jer, Debbie, Mary, Bess, John, Joan and Margaret.

James Donnelly, when a young man, was noted for his capabilities as a fast and enduring runner. Thady O'Sullivan, a middleman, who lived at Coom Cottage, was a Road Contractor, and on one occasion, during the progress of a dispute, he struck the Co. Surveyor, a Mr. Stokes. For this insult Mr. Stokes naturally demanded and apology to be made before a certain, otherwise Mr. O'Sullivan's work as a contractor should cease. Road contractors were then important people, and they had certain suitable perquisites and preferment rights as employers of labour. Mr. O'Sullivan, not wishing to lose such privileges, decided to write a letter of apology, but through forgetfulness, or some such cause, he forgot to do so till the last day fixed by Mr. Stokes. On the morning of this day – it happened to be a fair day at Knocknagree – he handed the letter of apology to James Donnelly and asked him to go to Tralee as fast as he could, deliver the letter, and then bring home the answer.

James took the letter, had his breakfast about 8 o'clock a.m. and started for Tralee. He duly delivered the letter, got an answer from Mr. Stokes, and immediately set out for home. He arrived back at Coom Cottage at noon and found that Mr. O'Sullivan had gone to the fair. He ate his dinner at the Cottage after which he proceeded to the Fair. He made no undue delay. The custom then among the country people was to attend all Fairs, to enjoy the fun of watching the bargains among buyers and sellers, and often, indeed, to help in the making of such bargains. There was plenty of sport of other kinds too, very often a faction fight to be witnessed and sometimes joined in, the "Maggies" for displaying prowess in accurate throwing of sticks, the Thimble-riggers to be fooled (?) and so on. The first person James met at the Fair was Mr. O'Sullivan from whom he asked "the cost of the day" i.e. some money to spend among his friends and companions in the "games" but too often, alas, in indulgence in the "pint" or the "half glass". When Mr. O'Sullivan saw him he angrily exclaimed, "Get out of my sight this instant, you blackguard! Why did you not go to Tralee and deliver my letter?" James said nothing, but with a twinkle in his eye, he put his hand into an inner pocket of his coat, took out his letter and handed it to the angry man. On reading the answer from Mr. Stokes, Mr. O'Sullivan found out that everything was satisfactory and he then gave James as much money as satisfied him, not only for that day, but for many days after. James ran along the road to Tralee and back on that occasion, a distance of close on fifty miles, and did the journey in less than four hours! His father, Old Denis, was a good runner also. For a wager he ran from Tralee with "The Coach and Four" to Rathmore and reached Rathmore before the Coach.

The Donnelly family, and that of Paddy Sheils Dha, were the first families to settle in the village of Gneeveguilla.

THE TOWNLAND OF SCRATHANAVEAL (SCRATHAN A' BHEAL)

About a hundred years ago or more, this townland of Scrathanaveal was possessed by families of the Falveys, the MacCarthys, and by an O'Sullivan Mor who came from Knockragh, near Killarney. The Falveys came originally from Aghadoe and claimed the distinctive title of O'Falvey Fionn. The O'Sullivan Mor had a dispute with his landlord at one time and the result was that he sold out his effects, gave up the farm and went to America with his wife and family. Darby Riordan, who came from Annhillmore, Glenclesk, then got O'Sullivan's house and farm, and Darby's descendants have been occupying them for the past three generations, and to the present day. The O'Falvey families continued in occupation and representatives of the O'Falveys still have that portion of the Townland possessed by their ancestors. The MacCarthy families were not equally fortunate, and at present their only descendant is one who has but a small part of the lands formerly held by his ancestors.

TOWNLAND OF LYREATOUG

Lyreatoug is a name got from the Irish Ladhar a'tSeabhac, the hollow place of the hawks. The townland was in old times a barren mountain used for the summer grazing of cattle. It was all a bog and for the past 100 years turf has been cut in it except in a part which was at an early period in the occupation of a William Fleming. Turf is being still cut there but the greater portion is reclaimed, and there are many comfortable farms in the townland now. About 100 years ago it was in the possession of the Brennans, middlemen who lived at Mastergeeha, a neighbouring townland. These middlemen used the lands of Lyreatoug for the mountain grazing of dry cattle, and kept a herdsman who had a house where Owen MacCarthy lived. The first tenants who got portions of the townland to reclaim were the MacCarthys, the Moynihans, the Cullotys, the O'Carrolls, Darby Cronin and Tom Ryan. The grandfather of William Flemming of Milleen, another William Fleming, had a part of Lyreatoug under the MacSweeneys - middlemen who lived in, and had tenants in adjoining townlands. The land of some of the townland is naturally wet, and much improvement could be made in it by opening drains along a slope to The Caol, a river which runs into the Owneecree a tributary of the Flesk river which flows into the Killarney Lakes. It is a remarkable thing that wet as the land is, there are but two spring wells in the whole townland which, roughly, contains five or six hundred areas of land. The families to be dealt with now were the first settlers in Lyreatoug.

All the townland of Tournanonagh, except portions of it held by Larry Buckley, Owen O'Sullivan, and Dan Mahony, was in the possession of the MacGillicuddys. Some members of the MacGillicuddy family, however, in later times sold their farms to others, and now all but three of the family have farms there. These are Pat, Dan and Pat with whom and their descendants we have just dealt with. The families of the Kerrisks who got some of the MacGillicuddy farms have also been dealt with.

Owen O'Sullivan, Meath, (pron. May.) one of the earliest settlers in the townland of Tournanonagh was m. and had a family. He was a man very robust in body, and was fond of "cutting a dash" among his neighbours. Hence the title, Meath, which is equivalent to robust or strong. He kept stud horses and was the owner of a celebrated one. The ground where he exercised the animals still shows the ring marks made by them. On one occasion a stallion of his broke loose and killed most of his other farm animals. This was a disaster from which he was unable to recover and the result was that he was forced to leave his home, and, it is thought, go to America with his family. The only relative, or perhaps descendant of his of which an account can now be given by Narrator was John Sullivan who came to Knockaninane and m. a d. of William Fleming there, and whose issue was Peter, Mrs. Lynch, Ellen and a son who died when a young man. They had Mary also.

Mary O'Sullivan went to America and m. there Jack MacGillicuddy of Anabla.

Humphry Mahony came from Droumadeesart to Tournanonagh. He was m. to Mary Lawlor, probably an aunt of Old Pat Lawlor of Droumadeesart. He had a farm at Tournanonagh of about four or five hundred acres and the house there is said to have been built by a Lynch. He must have spent some time in the English navy, and in consequence, knew but little of the conditions under which farmers then lived. At one time the Rate Collector called, accompanied by some bailiffs and police, in order to collect the rates which, for some reason, Humphry had neglected to pay. He might have been doubtful as to the propriety or justice of the demand previously made, and he told the Rate Collect that he had not the money then, but that he would have it without fail within a certain time which he specified. Had the Collector called without an escort Humphry would doubtless have paid the amount due, but the escort and the implied threat of what he considered a forcible demand, got his back up and he wished to show resentment by refusing to pay on the spot. The Collector would take no excuse for non-payment and he instructed his bailiffs to seize some cattle in a field near by. A free fight ensued and, we are told, that Humphry thrashed the bailiffs and police "within an inch of their lives" as the Narrator graphically put it. Needless to say, the seizure did not take place, and the Collector had to go away in a hurry. When Humphry cooled off after having had a chat with his neighbours, he made up his mind to pay the rates due, and within the time he specified. The payment did not however, satisfy the Rate Collector or the police, and law proceedings for assault and battery followed. Humphry's solicitor put up a good defence to the magistrates by asserting with a great show of anger and indignation that his honourable client's word had been doubted, that he had not the money with him at the time the "raid" was made, and that he paid up within the time he promised. He went on to say that a gentleman like his client should have been treated with more consideration, and that there was no necessity for the display of force on the part of the Collector. The result was that the verdict of the magistrates was in Humphry's favour. His action was regarded as a "first offence" or perhaps the magistrates looked upon him as a sort of middleman and as one of themselves. Middlemen at this time were treated with every consideration in the courts being looked upon as strong upholders of English rule in Ireland. The people of Tournanonagh were then Irish Speaking and Humphry's attempts to speak this language caused much merriment among them. He cared little however for their criticism; he said it was but right that he should learn it, and in the end he succeeded. At the close of his life he spoke nothing else but Irish. He had a large family all of whom emigrated except Mollie and Dan.

THE MACSWEENEY MIDDLEMAN OF KILCUMMIN

Old Morgan MacSweeney of East Kilcummin and his family have already been dealt with. There were other collateral branches of his family whose members were also middlemen in mid and west Kilcummin. The MacSweeneys came to Kilcummin from the County Cork where a colony of them settled at Crookstown, Aughabulloge, etc., after the Battle of Kinsale. They came from the North of Ireland, or perhaps from Scotland originally, and were employed by the southern Irish Kings and chiefs as Galloglasses, or heavily-armed and mailed soldiers who were quite suited in every way to meet in battle the iron-clad soldiers of the Anglo Norman invaders. The MacSweeneys, MacDonnells, MacAuliffes, etc., were employed for a similar purpose. The leading men of all such families were highly respected by the Irish chiefs and kings and they got grants of land here and there on condition that they were to procure tenants. Such lands were held by them under leases and they came to be known as Ceithearnaig or middlemen. They had all the powers of landlords while their leases held. The MacSweeney family were middlemen in Kilcummin and the various branches of it were descended from a common ancestor. In middle Kilcummin, Dan MacSweeney, Brian MacSweeney, Ned MacSweeney, Thomas MacSweeney and in West Kilcummin, Valentine MacSweeney, held farms themselves and had tenants in adjoining farms.

THE FLEMINGS OF COOLICK

In the parish register of births (Kilcummin parish) there is recorded that many different families of Flemings lived in the townland of Coolick. It is very probable that those families were related to one another but it cannot now be ascertained with any degree of correctness how near such relation was. One thing is certain viz., that all of them held portions of land of varying extent in this townland. Many of them occupied portions of the mountain part of the farm held under lease dated 1811 by a John P. Fleming. Other families besides Flemings lived in this mountain farm for we find that at the present day some of its fields bear names associated with families of Barry, Fernane, Moriarty and Kerrisk. All those were what was called at the time subtenants and from time to time were transferred to better farms then to be obtained under middlemen or small landlords who held large tracts under the descendants of Undertakers to whom such were granted after the Elizabethan and Williamite wars. There are many now living who say that all the Fleming families of Coolick were descended from a common ancestor but this cannot be vouched for at least from traditional sources and indeed it does not much matter now.

According to a tradition of a family or families of Flemings were brought to Coolick by a captain Browne in the seventeenth century. This Captain Browne was a member of the Browne family from whom the present Earl of Kenmare is descended. He was known locally as Lord Dunrine, but there is nothing in our historical records to warrant his right to such a title. It is recorded in Smith's History of Kerry that a Captain Browne lived in a castle in the townland of Ardagh, Kilcummin. The remains of this castle are still to be seen and there is no doubt but that parts of it were used in building some farmhouses in the district round about. This castle at Ardagh was the residence first built by the Borwne family who afterwards went to Molahiffe after having acquired through mortgage from the last MacCarthy More a very large part of East Kerry, and which afterwards came to be known as The Kenmare Estate. The struggle between the descendants of this MacCarthy More and the Brownes for this territory, afterwards, was indeed a very interesting one and it is detailed in many of our Kerry histories. The middlemen and tenants of the Brownes were raided without mercy by the followers of Daniel MacCarthy - the Robin Hood of Munster as he was styled, and Captain Browne was forced to select strong positions here and there in that part of the Kenmare Estate under his charge. To such strongholds he brought numbers of fighting men to meet the onslaughts of Daniel MacCarthy's men. Coolick was one of these positions. Here the Captain built a house near a strong fort or Lios which over 100 years ago was a notable landmark in the neighbourhood. This fort owing to a high and steep earthen ditch or fence which surrounded it was eminently suited for defence and it must have been selected by the Captain as a place to keep watch for the marauders who constantly harassed him and his people. It is thought now that he brought here a number of families to whom he gave portions of land in the Coolick townland. In the course of time the Captain gave this house to a family named Fleming whose descendants will be dealt with in this genealogical effort. With this house he also gave a farm of over 200 acres to this Fleming family. One half of this f. was mountain, land portion of which was sublet by the Flemings to a number of tenants who reclaimed much of it from time to time. The first member or head of this family of which there is now an account was a Patrick Fleming, who had a son named John to succeed him as owner of both farms. There were other children also but nothing is known of them save that one of them, a man, became an engineer who was drowned in the St. Lawrence River in Canada while surveying for the English in this then but little-known land. A daughter of his was m. to John Healy of clasnagarrane whose descendants have been dealt with already. In 1811 John Fleming got a lease of both farms on the lives of his son, Pat, a Father O'Riordan and another. This lease, by the way, did not expire till 1890 on the death of Fr. She had a crop of oats in her field when she was evicted and it is said that it was a very fine crop indeed. As she was leaving she uttered the following wish: "that there may never again be such a crop in my field." For upwards of 60 years this field was not tilled but once, over twelve years ago. On that year there was a crop of potatoes, oats and turnips grown in it and the yield was so poor that it was not tilled since. Local opinion has it that this was the result of what the people of the place call "Jude's Curse". The field has not been tilled since.)

It cannot be stated now with any certainty what farms these families occupied in Coolick but it is probably that the farms so occupied were those which afterwards came into the possession of John Daly and Corney MacCarthy. It may be useful also to give here the information that after 1847 many settlers came to Knockacullig N. which then belonged to the O'Riordan family of middlemen. Such settlers had to build houses themselves and set down to till and reclaim wild mountain land on condition that they should have not only to pay rent but also to give a certain number of days in what was then termed "duty work" which meant that they had to go to Gortroe and other residences of those middlemen where they were obliged to work for no pay and but two meals a day.
